

ROUNDUP

May 2024

Dear Readers,

As we embark on another journey through the pages of ABWCI's Roundup – May 2024 Edition, it fills us with great joy and anticipation to connect with you once again. With the Roundup, we aim to encapsulate the spirit of our global community, sharing stories of resilience, innovation, and collective progress.

In this edition, we celebrate the achievements of our presidents, members, partners and the team. As we turn these pages together, may you find inspiration, knowledge, and perhaps a touch of wonder. Let us continue to foster a space where ideas flourish, and possibilities expand.

Thank you for being an integral part of our journey. Your support, feedback, and engagement drive us to continually strive for excellence.

Happy Reading!

INTERVIEWS THAT INSPIRE

JOURNEY OF BELIEF & PERSISTENCE WITH EMELDA MWAMANGA

1. CAN YOU SHARE A BIT ABOUT YOUR BACKGROUND AND HOW YOUR FAMILY, ESPECIALLY YOUR PARENTS, INFLUENCED YOUR JOURNEY TO WHERE YOU ARE TODAY?

I'm the eldest of two daughters, born and raised in Tanzania. I'm recognized as a global leader in championing women's empowerment. I founded Bang magazine in 2004. Additionally, I hold the position of Principal Consultant at Relim Company Limited and Chair the White Foundation, focusing on women and climate change. My involvement with Vital Voices, founded by Hillary Clinton, underscores the importance of women's leadership. Previously, I worked at Coca Cola, where my passion for creating magazines began. Raised in a family of girls, my mother once expressed that my sister and I were her sons and daughters, challenging societal norms where girls were often expected to follow a traditional path of school, marriage, and domesticity. So, coming from that background, I wanted to be more than just it all.

2. HOW DID YOUR EXPERIENCE WITH NEWSLETTERS AT COCA COLA LEAD TO THE CREATION OF BANG, YOUR FIRST MAGAZINE?

When I returned to Tanzania after studying in South Africa, I noticed a stark difference in the media development. South Africa had a thriving magazine industry covering various topics like lifestyle, fashion, and health. However, Tanzania lacked such publications. Inspired by magazines like Oprah and Essence, I saw an opportunity to fill this gap. That's why I founded Bang magazine, with the acronym "Bang" standing for "believer, never give up," aiming to inspire women like myself to pursue their dreams and share their stories.

3. WHAT INSPIRES YOU AND INFLUENCES YOUR WORK?

My father as an entrepreneur inspired me to start my own business at 22. I draw inspiration from successful women worldwide and engage with self-motivation literature. Currently, I'm writing a book titled "Finding My Voice" and recently published "Pivoting in Heels," interviewing 60 women leaders about navigating the pandemic.

4. WHAT IS YOUR VISION ON SUCCESS? WHEN ARE YOU HAPPY AND SATISFIED?

I believe fulfilment comes from the ongoing progress toward my goals. Success for me means leaving a lasting legacy, empowering others, and witnessing the positive impact that I have made on the lives of people.

5. THERE'S A QUOTE ON YOUR WEBSITE. WAS THAT A QUOTE FROM MANY TO CHOOSE FROM? OR WAS IT ALWAYS YOUR OWN?

It's deeply personal. After a challenging divorce, I felt lost for three years. It made me question my identity and feel like a failure. But I reminded myself that life goes on, and I focused on my original dreams, not just those of being a spouse or parent. Acceptance and faith helped me move forward. I want others to know that believing in something greater than oneself can bring hope even in tough times. I know, once you're not happy at home, then you can't be a good leader, no matter how much you have learned and trained.

6. HAVE THERE BEEN ANY PIVOTAL MOMENTS IN YOUR JOURNEY THAT SIGNIFICANTLY SHAPED OR ALTERED YOUR PATH?

Transformative moments? Several stand out. Becoming president of ABWCI, a global platform for women in commerce, tops the list. It's a chance to empower women in cross-border businesses. Awards & recognition also mark milestones but community service remains a priority.

7. COULD YOU SHARE SOME INSIGHTS ABOUT YOUR NGO, DARE TO DREAM BIG, AND ITS FOUNDING RATIONALE?

My dream was founded, when I started the magazine and I wanted to give back to the community. I looked at myself, I looked at what helped me, to give me that platform to be able to start my business. We as women need mentors, who can help us move forward without making a lot of mistakes. So, I dared to create Dare to Dream Big as a mentorship platform connecting successful women with the women who need support. So every year the mentorship seminars happen globally to support women with insights on financial products and inspiration from global leaders. There was a time, when I wanted to do so many things, but it affected my business because now the finances were being channelled to different things. But my mentor helped me focus on doing one thing at a time. So, I saw the importance of having a mentor.

8. WHAT IS YOUR ADVICE TO YOUNG MANAGERS WHO ARE STARTING THEIR OWN JOURNEY?

My advice for a manager that are starting would be that leadership has to come from your heart. You need to know that you have a role to play, you want to play that role, and believe in yourself. Having empathy and connecting with people both are very important. So for me in my journey, I had to believe in myself, that I'm capable and I can do it. I had to connect to the people around me because at the end of the day, whether you're doing a product or service, you're working with people, and once the people understand you and believe in you, that means you're motivating them. You're showing them the importance of a leader, and they accept you & the journey.

"Today I am here to inspire you to keep going just a little bit longer. There is a future very bright ahead of you. I am sending you faith " - Emelda Mwamanga
